

OFFICIAL PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, high ethical standards serve as the basis for a fair society, the protection of individual rights and the framework for morally responsible reasoning; and

WHEREAS, educating the next generation of government, business and community leaders about developing a strong ethical mindset is critical to achieving a better future for humanity; and

WHEREAS, ethics in business training through Junior Achievement and ethics in government training by public officials seek to engage students in and out of the classroom throughout Brown County; and

WHEREAS, the November 15th, 2012 American Foundation of Counseling Services' Ethics in Business Award Luncheon is the center of a day dedicated to the community-wide promotion of the awareness and affirmation of the contribution ethics makes to the quality of relationships within and between businesses, government, service providers, educators, marriages, and families;

NOW, THEREFORE, we, Troy J. Streckenbach, Brown County Executive and James J. Schmitt, Mayor of the City of Green Bay on behalf of the citizens of our community, do hereby proclaim Thursday November 15, 2012 as in the City of Green Bay and throughout Brown County, and urge all citizens in our community and throughout the country to participate in the instruction and exercise of high ethical standards.

GOOD ETHICS DAY

Dated this 15th day of November, 2012

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Troy J. Streckenbach", written over a horizontal line.

Troy J. Streckenbach
Brown County Executive

A horizontal line representing a signature.

James J. Schmitt
Mayor, City of Green Bay